Falkirk District Council Finding Aid (1)

The finding aid for the records of Falkirk District Council has been divided into 7 parts. This part contains a list of the minutes and related papers of the Council and its Committees.

Falkirk District Council was established in 1975 under the 1973 Local Government (Scotland) Act. It was replaced by Falkirk Council in 1996 under the Local Government (etc) Scotland Act 1994. The 1973 Act abolished Burghs and Counties and replaced them with a two-tier structure of 53 districts and 9 regions except in the three island areas which had all-purpose single tier authorities. Falkirk District Council's geographic area included the four former burghs of Bo'ness, Denny & Dunipace, Falkirk and Grangemouth as well as the southern and eastern parts of the former County of Stirling. Falkirk District was one of three new districts (the others being Stirling District and Clackmannan District) which together formed the geographic area for Central Regional Council.

In the two tier structure, Districts had responsibilities for local planning, development control, urban development, industrial development, listed buildings and ancient monuments, conservation areas, housing, building control, libraries, tourism, countryside, nature conservation, leisure and recreation, parks, museums and art galleries, environmental health, cleansing, refuse collection and disposal, public toilets, employment of young people, administration of district courts, licensing of dogs, betting and gaming, theatres and cinemas, taxis and liquor, community centres, caravan sites, war memorials, burial and cremations, markets, slaughterhouses, allotments, shop hours, food hygiene standards and labelling, health and safety at work. These functions were transferred to Falkirk Council in 1996.

Falkirk District Council re-organised its departments several times during the twenty years of its existence. The archival records have therefore been arranged into functional groupings and the details of departmental arrangements, where known, are explained in the relevant part of this finding aid.
